ABOUT THE TRAINING

This training is for leaders from all over the country (grassroots organizers, people of faith, elected officials, labor leaders and public health officials) who want to learn to make a difference.

Leadership training teaches ordinary people to unleash their capacity to impact the social, political, environmental and economic decisions affecting their lives.

"My time at week-long was, in a word, transformative... this has not taken away the fears and the difficulties with leading, but it has allowed me to walk through those fears and difficulties. And every time I do it, I've gotten stronger and stronger, and it all comes back to that week I spent with a group of other people that had the same internal struggles that I did, and we all came out the other side together.

PARTICIPANTS CAN EXPECT TO:

- Learn more about the history of social movements and to explore their own family story and their personal experiences around race and equity in society.
- Learn how to address structural racism through effective organizing; how to view campaigns through a racial lens and to examine how diverse groups of people relate to each other and deal with race.
- Practice new behaviors and discover how to craft and lead effective action that wins real change for real people.
- Engage in work that analyzes how power operates in public life.
- Take risks and wrestle with what it takes to create change in the public arena.
- Learn about the dynamic field of community organizing and their role in creating powerful organizations.
- Build the capacity to raise money to sustain organizations.
- Reexamine their current strengths and weaknesses and develop the skill of learning the stories and motivations of others.
- Create the capacity to develop teams by drawing other people to themselves.
- Develop an analysis about racial equity and health as a frame for organizing work.

A Diverse, Genuinely Honest & Safe Environment

You will engage with other participants from varied backgrounds and experiences in a learning community that is purposely created to encourage sharing and emphasize self- reflection, introspection and mutual inquiry.

By the end of the week, you will develop a personal plan of action for becoming a more effective and powerful person.

Mohamed Omar and Raquel Molina spoke to a room of 1000 after their weeklong experience.
